The Donkey, the Fox and the Lion

A Donkey and a Fox made a promise to protect each other the next time that they go hunting. The next day, they went hunting together. Within minutes into their walk in the forest, they come across a Lion. The Fox approached the Lion and promised to help him capture the Donkey, if the Lion won't harm the Fox. The Fox then calls the Donkey and promising that he won't be harmed. The Fox leads the Donkey to a deep pit. Trusting his friend, the Donkey falls in the deep pit and is trapped. The Lion, seeing that the Donkey can't escape, traps the fox in his jaws.

1. List the three animals in this story: ________________
   ________________
   ________________

2. Circle the first three verbs in this story.

3. List two nouns in the story:
   ________________
   ________________

4. What can we learn from this story?
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________

5. What can you do so that you don't end up like the fox?
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________