

The Process

Name _____ Date _____

Writing a story is a process. You must think of the story, explain things like characters, plot, and setting to the reader, and then share the problem. Before the story can end the problem should be solved and the loose ends tied up. Use organizers like this to help keep everything straight.

My story will be about: _____

My characters will be: _____

My setting will be: _____

The details that I want to include: _____
