

Slow Down For Details

Writing a story can be easier if you think of the steps like a traffic light. Red is the place where you start your idea (story), yellow is for the details (setting, problems, characters), and green is for the solution or possible ending. Use these lights to get your story idea started.

Have a partner or friend read over your ideas and offer some feedback in the extra circle. Do the same for your friend.