Prove Your Point (of View)!

Read each story and decide what the point of view is. Then make two copies of the graphic organizer. For each story, write three sentences that are evidence for the point of view you wrote.

Ted's family went to the beach on vacation. It was fun to body surf in the waves and lie on the beach in the sun. Ted took lots of photos of interesting shells and rocks. His mom enjoyed eating seafood by the water.

"This sounds like a plan for next year!" he said. "What do you guys think?"

We spent our vacation in the city. There were lots of interesting things to do. I loved the spy museum. We also rode a glass elevator up the side of the tallest building! At the top, there is a place to walk outside with a railing. The wind was so loud we could barely hear each other talk. I yelled to my brother, "This is so cool!"

BONUS: Fill out the graphic organizer for several stories you have read. How many are first person? Third person?
