

ANSWERS

POV: First Person

The narrator is relating things which he could not possibly know, or which he knows only secondhand, suggesting that everything he tells us is going to be how he has made sense out of what he sees around him and is not necessarily the truth but only the truth as far as he can figure it out.