How Authors Develop Characters

DIRECTIONS: Author's use different points of view in a story to develop character. What the narrator thinks of a character, what other characters think of a character, and what a character thinks about the world and about him or herself all contribute to bringing a character to life. For this exercise, choose a major character from a book you have recently read. Fill in the organizer below to analyze how the author uses different points of view in the story to develop that character.
