The Importance of Failure

After many failed attempts to invent electric light, Thomas Edison is reputed to have said, “I haven’t failed; I’ve just found 10,000 ways that it won’t work.” He also maintained that “Many of life’s failures are people who didn’t realize how close they were to success when they gave up.”

DIRECTIONS: Explain how and why you think that failure is important to success.