Day at the Beach

It was the first day of summer and Trisha was going to the beach with her friend Samantha. They were both very excited. “I’m going to bring my swimming goggles and try to see some fish under the water,” Trisha said.

“I’m going to bring my water fins and see if I can swim around like a mermaid,” Samantha replied.

When they got to the beach, Trisha’s father pointed to the lifeguard station. “That is a lifeguard,” he said. “His job is to make sure you stay safe.”

“Is that why you told us to always listen to the lifeguard?” Trisha asked. “So we always stay safe?”

“Yep,” her father said. “As much as I want you to have fun, I want you to stay safe even more.”

“Got it, dad,” Trisha yelled as she and Samantha waved to the lifeguard. “We will.”
