Looking Ahead

Directions: Seeing the "end result" of your character will help you determine what your character needs to do in the story to get to that point in his/her life. For example, if you want your character to become a successful musician by the end, you need to write about the journey and struggles it took to get to that point. Write a detailed paragraph describing your character at the end of your story, so you know what information you need to include in your story.
