Hurricane and Tornadoes Mad Libs

What a windy day! The wind was ______ (a word describing a loud noise) and there were bits of ______ (something you'd find in a bin) flying all over the place.

Somebody said there was going to be a hurricane.

I needed to go and get a ______ (something silly) from the shop, but my ______ (family member) warned me not to. They said: “You know what they say about hurricanes! They are ______ (describing word) and ______ (a color)!”

I went anyway, but I had only been outside for ______ (a number), when a ______ (something you might put in a lunchbox) was blown at me, and hit me in the ______ (a body part).

“______ (a silly word)!” I said angrily, picking it up and throwing it at a ______ (a color) car nearby. But the wind blew it back at me, this time hitting me in my ______ (a different body part).

I carried on to the shop, and I was only ______ (a number) feet away, when a ______ (something describing size) gust of wind blew me right off my feet, right back to my house, and into my back garden. I landed in a pile of ______ (something nasty found in the garden).
